GAS SMELLED IN TEST WELL

DRILLER SAYS ODOR NOTICEABLE AT 754 FEET.

DOWN 863 AT MIDDAY

Limestone Continues to Predominate, But An Easily Crumbling Red Shale May Cause Trouble.

A "showing" of gas late yesterday afternoon was reported by G. H. Rose, Breckenridge driller, who is sinking a test oil well for the Quitman Oil and Gas Co.

The gas, according to Rose, was in a "pocket" at a depth of 754 feet in a layer of broken sand and shale. The odor of gas was very noticeable, the driller said.

Small pockets of gas often are found in the higher levels of wells and then brought in in paying quantities farther down, he explained. A gas well, to be profitable commercially, should produce a million cubic feet a day, he estimated.

The broken sand and shale was only five feet in depth, after which the drill went back into lime and continued for twenty-six feet practically unbroken. After eleven feet of a dark shale, the drill again went into the rock. From then until noon today it was all limestone except for a ten-foot layer of light shale and a layer of dark shale of similar depth.

Just before noon today a red shale was encountered. This caused some uneasiness on the part of the drillers, as this type of shale caves badly and might necessitate more casing if it continues.

The depth of the well at noon today was 863 feet. At midnight last night it was an even 800 feet. The Cherokee division of the Pennsylvania formation, in which H. P. Manning, geologist, predicts that five sands capable of bearing oil will be found, is expected to be reached at about 1,100 feet.

"It's just getting interesting," Driller Rose announced.

C. of C. Secretary Chosen at Marshall

Marshall, Mo., June 8.—The Chamber of Commerce here has employed J. C. Patterson of Corydon, Ia., to take over the duties as secretary of the organization. The board of directors gave their official sanction just recently to the appointment.

Patterson has engaged in business for himself and has been employed in the shoe department of a large city store. While meeting with the directors here he outlined a program of work, which seemed favorable to the Chamber directors.

Salt Recommended for Storing Uncured Hay

Is Best Method To Prevent Excessive Fermentation And Chances Of Spontaneous Combustion.

Salt is recommended by competent authorities as an effective and cheap way to reduce the spontaneous combustion fires in hay which are responsible for many of the barn and hay-stack losses. Spontaneous combustion in hay is the result of too much water, due to the hay not being thoroughly dried before it is stored or stacked. This may sound silly to the average layman, but every student of spontaneous combustion knows that it is true. When the water-content is high, and the hay is piled so that the air cannot get at it, the fermentation is so excessive that a dangerous degree of heat is generated.

The use of salt is recommended when hay is stored which is not thoroughly cured. A sprinkling of salt reduces the moisture and so lowers the danger of fire. From three to ten pounds per ton is recommended as adequate for hay stored in wet weather. Threatening or continued rain often induces the farmer to take a chance and store his hay before it is properly cured, and the use of salt would reduce the danger of the fire from heating.

Hunt and he and Dr. James were boyhood friends.

Holachaway Camp, the annual gathering of 4-H club members of Holat Atchison and Nodaway counties, will be held on August 4, 5, and 6 this year. The camp will be located on the Jack Moore farm, about a mile southeast of Clearmont. This announcement was made this morning by J. Ross Fleetwood, county extension agent, who is manager of the camp.

All boys and girls of the three counties who have been members of 4-H clubs this year are eligible to attend the camp, one of the features of which will be the swimming pool owned by Ross Wallace of Clearmont. This pool is located a quarter of a mile from the proposed camp site.

Sanitation at the camp will be under the direction of the Nodaway County Health Department. Dr. C. P. Fryer, county health officer, will inspect the camp and the water, and Misses Margaret Davison and Edith Cramer, health nurses, will attend the camp and be in charge of the health of the children.

C. W. Davis and E. T. Itschner, county extension agents of Atchison and Holt counties, will assist Mr. Fleetwood in the management of the camp.

Each boy and girl attending the camp will be required to pay a small fee, furnish his own toilet articles, dishes, and bedding. Tents, cots and food will be furnished by the three county farm bureau organizations.

The camp will start on the morning of Thursday, August 4, and will be broken Saturday evening.

NO FUNDS FOR STATE CASES

WITNESSES IN CRIMINAL ACTIONS MUST WAIT FOR FEES.

APPROPRIATION GONE

For Years, Says State Auditor, Legislature Has Failed to Provide Sufficient Money.

Witnesses in all future criminal cases in the Nodaway County circuit court, together with the county officials entitled to fees therefrom, will have to go without pay until the legislature apropriates a sufficient amount, according to official notices received by Virgil Rathbun, circuit clerk, and Miss Bess Thorp, county treasurer, from L. D. Thompson, state auditor.

The state auditor notified the two county officials that the appropriation for the payment of criminal costs for the years 1925 and 1926 is exhausted, adding:

"No more criminal cost can be paid until the legislature makes new appropriations for that purpose.

"This department has for years asked the legislature appropriation committee to make the appropriation large enough to pay all criminal costs for the two-year period but they always reduce it about $150,000 and this creates a deficiency of about that amount and makes the officers, jurors and witnesses wait a year for their money and causes this department to write hundreds of letters, and you to answer thousands of questions.

"Will you please take this matter up with your member of the legislature and ask him to look into this so that the apropriation will be large enough to pay all criminal costs for two years as well as the deficiency.

"Send in the cost bills so that they can be audited and paid at once when the apropriation is made."

The procedure for witnesses in felony cases is to submit their bills to the circuit clerk, who certifies them to the state auditor. The auditor checks them and authorizes payment to the county treasurer. The witnesses then are expected to call at the office of the treasurer to claim the fees.

Mrs. Thorp has the money to pay fees for a number of cases tried at the January term of the court, but in cases tried since that term the witnesses will have to wait.

British Relations With Turkey Healed

Signature of Treaty Defining Boundary Between Vilayet of Mosul and Turkey Announced.

London, June 8.—Signature of a treaty defining the boundary between the Vilayet of Mosul and the Turkish republic was announced today in London. The treaty was signed Saturday in Angora, and British opinion accepts it as healing the trouble which has marred Turko-British relations since the conference at Lausanne in 1923.

Mosul becomes a part of Irak, which in turn is an "independent" kingdom of Asia minor supported by Great Britain under the terms of a League of Nations mandate whose life has just been prolonged for 25 years.

The new treaty, it was announced in London, follows the course of the so-called Brussels line with a deviation involving approximately five square miles. That area was assigned to Turkey to facilitate transport between Turkish villages which otherwise would have been impeded. The frontier finally will be established by a special commission consisting of a neutral president with other delegates representing turkey. The commission will report within six months. The treaty is in force for ten years but may be abrogated by either party after two years by giving one year's notice. Turkey is to receive 10 per cent of the revenue accruing to Irak from oil field during 25 years.

The British press editorially approved the treaty.

Married Men not Only "Seem" to Live Longer, But Do

Chicago, June 8.—The wag who asked "why do married men live longer than single ones" and then answered "they don't, it only seems longer," was wrong in only one respect.

They do.

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, city health commissioner, today made public records of the health department for 1925 showing that for each age period, married men have longer death rates than single, widowed or divorced men.

Out of every one thousand men from 24 to 34, those who die include 15 who are divorced, 5 who are single and only 4 who are married. From 35 to 44 years, the married man is even safer, for 15 divorced men, 14 singles ones and only 7 married ones die. Between the ages of 55 and 64, 56 divorced men, 49 bachelors and only 29 married men die.

Above 65, Dr. Bundesen asserted, the ratio is even more favorable to the espoused group.

BROOKHART IS IOWA WINNER

ADMINISTRATION SUFFERS ANOTHER OUTSTANDING DEFEAT.

MAY WIN BY 65,000

Capital Politicians Shocked By Hugeness Of Insurgent's Victory—Democrats Take On New Hope.

Des Moines, June 8. — Smith W. Brookhart's lead over Senator Albert B. Cummins for the Iowa Republican Senatorial nomination mounted to more than 50,000 votes this afternoon.

Returns from 1,893 precincts out of 2,447 gave Brookhart 166,930; Cummins 113,590, and Clark, 53,112.

Claude R. Porter was leading his opponents for the Democratic nomination by more than 4,000 votes on the basis of returns of 902 precincts.

Des Moines, Ia., June 8.—With more than two-thirds of Iowa's 2,447 precincts already in, there was every indication late today that Smith W. Brookhart's plurality over Senator Albert B. Cummins for the Republican nomination for the United States Senate would be 65,000.

Brookhart, who earlier announced that he would leave immediately for Washington and urge farm relief measures, later changed his mind after a conference with his campaign leaders and announced he would go to Mason City to attend the state federation of labor convention. After that, he said, he would proceed East.

Des Moines, Ia., June 8.—Smith W. Brookhart has won the Republican nomination for the United States Senate by a decisive majority, returns throughout the day indicated.

His lead over Albert B. Cummins, with slightly more than half the precincts in the state heard from, was more than 35,000. Some of the Brookhart supporters predicted he would win by as much as 70,000. The returns, with more than half the precincts reported, showed:

Brookhart, 119,112.
Cummins, 83,647.
Clark, 34,981.

Resent Senate's Action.

A Republican is a Republican in Iowa and despite the fact that the state machine two years ago read Brookhart out of the party, Republican voters in general over the state evidently still consider him a good Republican and resented the Senate's action in seating Daniel F. Steck, a Democrat, over him and the action which administration leaders took.

As the Brookhart star of ascendency once more appeared today with Washington just around the corner, the lamp that has shone brightly for more than twenty years for Senator Albert B. Cummins was being dimmed. The organization that has functioned so efficiently in Iowa politics for a score of years has broken and Brookhart followers were claiming the mantle of the defeated leader had passed to their man.

From the time the first returns began rolling in, the result of the contest was never in doubt. Brookhart jumped into an early lead and as results continued to come in the lead was steadily increased. Cummins headquarters refused to admit defeat, hoping that new districts would bring a change in the unbroken trend toward the former junior Senator but the change did not come.

Cummins Predicts Fate.

The prediction made several weeks ago by Senator Cummins that "the Iowa farmers would hit every head in sight if denied farm relief" was borne out in yesterday's voting. The farmers chose Brookhart as the brick to hurl at the administration and their aim was good.

Des Moines, June 8.—The probability that three candidates will be in the field for the election to the Senate from Iowa this fall loomed today as the victory of Smith W. Brookhart as the Republican nominee seemed assured.

"We assure voters that this campaign is not ended—that it will continue until we have won," a statement from the headquarters of J. Howard Clark, who ran third in the Republican race for nomination, said.

Clark intimated before the campaign closed that he would be an independent candidate if defeated in the primary.

Des Moines, June 8.—Smith W. Brookhart, insurgent proponent of farm

MAY HOLD UP REDISTRICTING

SUB-COMMITTEE EXPECTED TO TAKE ACTION TODAY.

NOT ENOUGH FUNDS

G. O. P. Leaders Feel, Also, That Proposal, If Submitted, Would Bring Out Big Democratic Vote.

Jefferson City, June 8.—The sub-committee of the Republican state committee is expected to take definite action here today to abandon the proposal of submitting the Senate redistricting plan to the voters this year.

The sub-committee, headed by William F. Phares of Maryville, chairman of the Republican state committee, came here for a conference with Governor Baker and the other Republican state officers.

The state administration is reported to be opposed to the submission of the redistricting proposal this year because of the lack of funds with which to circulate initiative petitions and the danger in its resulting in a large Democratic vote.

The Republican organization contends the present Senatorial districts are manifestly unfair because the Republicans cannot control the Senate unless they carry the state by a majority of 150,000 at least.

The proposal to submit a redistricting proposal through the constitutional convention in 1923 was blocked through the efforts of Senator George H. Williams who, it is alleged, lined up with the Democratic members in defeating the proposal.

FARM BILL IS UP TO SENATE

LEADERS WILL UNITE ON DAWES PROPOSAL.

SAYS SCOPE IS WIDER

No Longer Just A Farmers' Fight.—Proposed Bill Would Establish Big Export Corporation.

Washington, June 8.—In the face of White House coolness, the farm bloc drive for enactment of the new Dawes plan of agricultural relief moved forward today with the Senate opening debate on amendments to the McNary-Haugen crop export bill.

The "economically sound" plan, sponsored by Vice President Dawes, came under direct consideration when Senator McNary, Republican of Oregon, proposed amendments revising his original bill. The amendments would carry out the Dawes plan of creating a 175-million-dollar export corporation for selling surplus crops abroad, with the farmers financing it through an equalization fee, payable as they market their crops.

With Vice-President Dawes supporting their demands for farm relief, the farm bloc leaders were hopeful of getting a vote in the Senate this week. They will support the Dawes plan over all other forms of relief.

"This is no longer a farmers' fight," observed Senator Gooding, Republican of Idaho, a leader of the bloc. "The vice-president, bankers and business men have joined us in urging farm relief legislation."

The terms of the proposed relief bill, Gooding added, have been much discussed, often denounced but are not generally understood.

Briefly, he said, the bill would create a farm corporation to sell surplus crops of wheat, cotton, corn and oats abroad, thus raising American marketing prices on farm products to the level of the American tariff wall, with farmers paying for the cost of operating the export by an equalization fee levied on every bushel of grain sold in America. The plan would include livestock, Gooding said, but its principal provisions would apply to wheat, cotton and corn crops.

WISE ROYALTY.

On King George's 61st birthday a Canadian newspaper, acknowledging the firm hold that sovereign has upon the people of the British Empire, explained it thus:

"While other thrones have tottered and fallen in the revolution against autocracy, the British throne remains the symbol of strengthened democracy. For the sympathies of the King are always with the people. His tactful act and timely word directed to the overcoming of discords and difficulties within the Empire, which he knows so well, reach to the man on the street, not because he is King, but because his appeal is in behalf of his people.

"Democratic government and democratic laws have reached farther in Great Britain since George V became sovereign than in any other country. True, he is not the government, and doesn't make the laws, but his blessing is on them all, so long as they represent the wishes and contribute to the welfare of the great mass of the population. As King he recognizes the sovereignty of his subjects. There can be no quarrel between the people and such a king."

Here is a picture of royal wisdom. It isn't the first time in history that a king has cast his lot with the masses of his countrymen rather than with subjects of title and wealth. But such a policy is shrewder today than ever before, because now the people have the power to rule, and are determined to use it.

So we have the odd spectacle of a real democracy reigning in the name of a king. Could our ancestors have imagined that in 1776?

THE FARM WOMAN'S FEATS.

It has always been recognized that farm women performed prodigies of labor, but the full story has never been told. Here is part of it, as revealed by the Western States Extension Conference.

The average rural housewife spends thirty days a year carrying water, pumping and carrying twenty tons of it into the house and then carrying it out again.

She washes and dries three acres of dishes a year.

She bakes countless pies, often walking a quarter of a mile per pie.

She could save ten days' time a year just by installing a drain to carry out the waste water, and the other twenty days by having a pump or faucet at her sink.

She could save drying these three acres of dishes by using a dish drainer, even if she couldn't afford a dish washer.

She could save one and a half miles of walking a day as a Montana woman did—proving it by a pedometer—and also save an hour and a half of time, by grouping her kitchen things more conveniently and taking short cuts.

TRIAL SEPARATION.

Now appears the "trial separation." A couple prominent in eastern society recently treated themselves to one of these experiments. Says the wife:

"I will not deny that all was not well with our household. I believe it is impossible for any couple to go through life without occasional clouds, but it certainly seems hasty to rush to the divorce courts without a previous trial separation.'

In their case the husband went to California and the wife to Paris. Now both are reported happily returned to re-open their summer home and spend a delightful season together.

If this sort of thing keeps on, divorces will go out of fashion in America. In time, perhaps, couples suffering from those occasional clouds may even learn to dispel them, or to get along in spite of them, as a matter of mutual and self-respect and common sense. Trial separations have much more to commend them than trial marriages.

Why fuss over Sinclair Lewis? Why not take his word for it that the judges had no business calling his novel the best of last year's crop and let it go at that?

BARBS

The Washington Irving, a million-dollar boat, sank in the North River. Maybe a headless horseman chased it.

Lightning destroyed a church clock in Easton, Pa. It was an antique. Quite an old timer.

Nothing increases a man's appetite more than his wife watching the meat dish to see if there will be enough left for hash.

You don't see any of the younger generation wearing veils. They are too dangerous after a few drinks of bad booze.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

By Charles P. Stewart.
NEA Service Writer.

Washington.—Congressmen are framing up their programs now for helping one another out during the coming campaign.

Some congressmen don't need much help. If they win at the primaries they win at the polls.

Others have hard fights on their hands. These are the ones who cry for aid.

Of course, each party wants its own man to win in his particular district, or, if he's a senator, his particular state. So it's up to each of the two congressional committees to see that plenty of reinforcements are ready to rush to the support of any of its candidates who seem in danger of getting caught in a jam.

The system is to draft candidates from "safe districts" to do their duty in "doubtful" ones.

An outsider can put in better licks in a candidate's district sometimes than the candidate himself.

A candidate can point to his past record and make promises for the future. He can argue. He can make the eagle scream. He can denounce. But he can't very well say that he, personally, is a great man.

An outsider can. That's his stunt. He doesn't come to discuss policies. He comes to discuss the personal virtues of that candidate.

A Bookworm Who Can't Read

Thomas Fentress is only four and he can't read yet. But he spends more time in the Richmond (Va.) public library than anyone else. He prefers books that have lots of pictures but isn't adverse to poring over those that have none. He comes to the library every day, pulls out a book—any book—and sits down with it.

UNDER THE CAPITOL DOME

SOME OLD JOE CANNON STORIES.

BY PAUL R. MALLON.
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Sacremento, Cal., June 8. (United Press).—Here are some old stories in which Joe Cannon, former speaker of the House of Representatives, is central figure. They are standard stories in the house and senate which are told and retold at all dinner parties.

Cannon's disregard for his personal appearance was a source of worry to his daughter with whom he lived at a hotel here during the height of his career. She objected particularly to an old coat that he insisted upon wearing.

Uncle Joe said the shopkeepers here wanted too much money for coats and that he could get them cheaper out in Danville, Illinois, his home town. Daughter told him that if he would go to a particular clerk in a certain store he could get an overcoat for $15 instead of paying $40. She had secretly arranged to pay the $25 difference out of her own funds.

The speaker went in and obtained the new coat for $15 wearing it to a committee meeting at the capitol. He told Rep. Hemingway, Indiana that he had purchased it for $15.

"Fifteen dollars!" exclaimed Hemingway, "Why I'll give you $25 for it right now."

Seeing a chance for $10 profit right away Uncle Joe sold Hemingway the coat, and sent for his old one. He did plenty of explaining to his daughter that night.

One of Cannon's friends asked him how he came to buy an automobile when he had always opposed their use.

"The womnin folks insisted on having one and they picked this one out," Cannon is said to have replied. "But I can't exactly say I bought it. You see my son-in-law wanted to match to see who should pay the bill.

"I was agreeable and reached for a chip. I spat on one side of it and tossed it up. John said 'wet' and it came 'dry' so he paid for the car."

A host at a dinner party about twenty years ago insisted on talking about how much he had paid for everything in his house. Finally he uncorked an especially fine brand of wine and holding it in his hand described how he had purchased it.

Uncle Joe grew impatient and interrupting, said:

"We don't give a continental darn what you paid for that wine. This is not the committee on appropriations but a bunch of thirsty impatients, and if you don't get that butler to pass it pretty quick, I for one will help myself to a whole bottle."

The wine was soon passed.

Do We Want the Primaries?

(St. Louis Post-Dispatch).

Looking over the field of candidates, in this state, who have already asked for preferment at the hands of the people in the coming primaries, and at those threatening to run as independents, for offices ranging from minor political positions to those of United States congressmen and senators, most of us find our gorge rising at the preposterous assumption on the part of some of this human material.

We regretfully begin to realize that it is our present system of primaries, once heralded as a cureall for every evil in politics, which makes it possible for this spume of ignorance and sublimated mediocrity to rise up and demand that positions of trust, which require brains, ability and trained administrative capacity, be placed in their inept care.

The political boss, the ward heeler and the scheming politician are making no outcry against the present primary system. They have no desire to return to the days of open conventions, where, as leaders, viewed by the spotlight of pitiless publicity, they were forced from necessity to pick candidates who possessed qualifications which would attract public attention and secure popular approval.

They find the working of the primary game much simpler. Certain in their knowledge that only a small part of the vote will come out in the primary, and that that vote is represented mainly by tried and true henchmen, the political leaders are assured, in advance, of the nomination of their pliant tools through the so-called popular voice of the people.

With our national, state, urban and municipal problems becoming more complex and abstruse each year—a situation which demands that these problems be handled by men of the highest attainments—are we willing to perpetuate a system of selecting men to represent our interests, most of whom we know to be of peanut mentality?

That the people will not vote for them in either party is evidenced by the steady shrinkage of the vote at the fall elections.

FORD'S HUGE PROFITS.

(Brooklyn Eagle).

If we had not become used to superpower finance the announcement that a single industrial concern had made a total profit of 526,441,951 in seven years would amaze us. There is something stupendous and unprecedented in a development of business that makes it possible for one organization to clear enough money to run a score of national governments. That the Ford Motor Company should show a profit at once so large and so consistent testifies to the stupendous development of this particular business and to the high quality of managerial skill displayed by its executives.

There is only one other concern that approximates the business done by the Ford company and that is the General Motors Company, which also sells motor cars. While the gross annual business of the Ford company last year totaled one billion dollars, General Motors was a poor second with a total of $734,000,000.

There are those who predict that with universal prosperity making the Ford car too cheap for even the average American artisan, that General Motors will outstrip the Ford company in total business within the next two years. On the other hand, the Ford plant may develop a six-cylinder medium-priced machine that will become a second "best seller." But it is significant that in the matter of net profits last year the Ford company with a total of $107,000,000, as against Ford's $115,000,000.

Camel is the smoker's sign of friendship

IN THE home, or at the club—in busy office or crowded street—whenever friend meets friend, you will hear that magic invitation—have a Camel!

And wherever Camels are lighted, men come together in more friendly understanding. No other cigarette ever had or made so many friends or brought so much added friendliness to the world as Camel, for Camel's quality is a universal language.

Camel is more than a cigarette. It is an experience in smoking enjoyment—the finest this old earth affords. Camels contain the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos grown, and these fine tobaccos are superbly blended, as in no other cigarette. The enjoyment of Camels goes on forever, for they never tire the taste no matter how liberally you smoke them. They simply never leave a cigaretty aftertaste. No other cigarette in the world is like them. Millions of experienced smokers who could well afford to pay more will buy and smoke only Camels.

Whenever and wherever you meet a friend, let that be a standing invitation to the sheerest enjoyment that ever came from a cigarette.

Have a Camel!

Why You Need A Hotpoint Electric Range

1. Keeps utensils and kitchen clean and spotless.
2. Convenient to operate — ever-ready heat.
3. Better cooking with the even perfectly controllable heat.
4. Safety—from fumes, overheating and burning matches.
5. Economical—cooks largely on stored heat.
6. Keeps kitchen cool and pleasant.
7. Requires less attention—correct temperature maintained automatically.
8. Turns On and Off without watching—more freedom.
9. Prevents burning or undercooking.
10. Retains food values and stops waste from shrinkage.

Come in and see for yourself how completely an electric range accomplishes these results, how it lightens housework and assumes perfectly cooked meals.

Artificial Gold Exhibit

The first sample of synthetic gold which has reached this country is to be an exhibit in the collection of elements at the American Museum of Natural History in New York. Dr. George F. Kunz, the well-known gem expert, who has the difficult task of gathering together samples of as many of the 92 elements as can be obtained or exhibited, states that the sample of what is said to be synthetic gold is a tiny speck.

It is a product from the laboratory of Prof. Hantaro Nagoska of the Tokyo Imperial university, who obtained microscopic quantities of what he reports to be artificial gold from mercury by running a mercury lamp over a long period and employing extremely high voltage. Doctor Kunz has in his collection the first crystals of pure fluoride of hafnium and metallic hafnium. He has not yet obtained samples of the two new elements, rhenium and masurium.

Peacocks Color Blind

We may be misjudging the peacock and rooster when we call them vain birds. For Dr. H. Erhard of Munich, who has been experimenting with the eyesight of birds, says that the shimmering colors in plumage probably mean nothing to the feathered creatures. At least they do not appreciate colors as we do, if, indeed, they even distinguish one color from another.

Birds that fly by day, Doctor Erhard says, see everything in a bright red-orange light, being very slightly sensitive to the short waves that make up blue and violet. Night birds, on the other hand, never see red, but do see blues and violet. Tiny globules of oil in the retina of the eyes act as color screens and determine the birds' color sense, according to Doctor Erhard.

Salmon's Long Trip

The Canadian department of marine and fisheries has marked a considerable number of Atlantic salmon, by attaching silver tags to their dorsal fins, for the purpose of tracing the movements of these fish.

A salmon that was marked and liberated off Burns point, Port Maitland, Yarmouth county, Nova Scotia, on June 11 was killed in the Moisie river, Quebec, in the early part of July.

If this fish took the most direct route it traveled about 800 miles, but if it followed the larger indentation of the shoreline it traveled over 1,200 miles.

Brookhart Is Iowa Winner

relief and former United States Senator, today apparently had been vindicated by the Iowa Republican voters who failed to elect him in 1924.

Returns this morning from 1,314 precincts of the state's 2,447 precincts show Brookhart leading in the race for the Republican nomination to the Senate by more than 30,000 votes over his closest opponent, the veteran Senator, Albert B. Cummins.

The vote this morning:

Brookhart, 124,213.

Cummins, 85,758.

The other Republican candidates were trailing far behind the two outstanding candidates. Politicians were inclined to believe that votes from the remaining 1,133 precincts would give Brookhart a much greater plurality. Some estimated that he would win by 70,000 votes.

Porter For Democrats.

In the Democratic race, Claude B. Porter, who is considered the best Democratic vote getter in the state, apparently has a safe lead over his nearest opponent, J. C. Murtaugh.

Gilbert H. Haugen, Republican, author of the farm relief measure, had a lead of 800 votes over Ewald Beerman, with sixty-one of 211 precincts counted.

Washington, June 8.—The corn belt revolt against the Coolidge administration is a fact and not a theory.

This was the interpretation which political leaders of all parties placed here today on the decisive defeat administered to Senator Albert B. Cummins by Col. Smith W. Brookhart in Iowa's Senatorial primary yesterday.

Brookhart's victory was a triumph for flaming insurgency and of a man who denounced Coolidge's policies from Iowa. That such a man could be nominated in so rock-ribbed a Republican state as Iowa gave the capital its nearest approach to a real political sensation it has had in the three years that Calvin Coolidge has been President.

Jolts G. O. P. Leaders.

Wherever politicians gathered today, the Iowa turnover was the sole topic of conversation and it started a trend of speculation in capital quarters that for the first time contained an element of serious doubt as to the ability of the Coolidge administration to retain its hold on the country again in 1928.

So keen a political observer as Senator William E. Borah, Republican of Idaho, summarized it thus:

"The Brookhart nomination is perhaps the most significant political event that has happened in recent years. Senator Cummins was highly regarded by everyone who knew him. He was a man of recognized authority and only a real political revolution could have defeated him. Brookhart's victory is a strong symptom that the revolution is here."

The Republican stalwarts of whom Cummins was one and who had, with considerable glee, expelled Brookhart out of the party and later from his seat in the Senate, were simply aghast at the Iowa result. They had worried somewhat, realizing that Brookhart was strong, but none of them had anticipated such a decisive insurgent victory.

The Democrats were no less overjoyed than the Republican insurgents. To them the defeat of Cummins signified that the tide of public opinion is beginning to roll fast and furious against Coolidge and they are now viewing their own chances in 1928 through the rosiest spector that they have worn for many a year.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed B. Mann and son, James Ed, of Orrsburg, and Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Herndon and daughter, Mildred, and Mr. and Mrs. James Miller of Parnell were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Roberts of Worth.

Harrietta Williamson of Elmo went to St. Joseph yesterday morning to undergo a tonsil and adenoid operation at St. Joseph's Hospital. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Murriel Williamson, and Mrs. Vern Gates.

Greatest Amateur Yatching Race In History, From Los Angeles to Hawaii, 2200 Miles, Starts June 12th

Miss Judith Nelson, Los Angeles yachtswoman, exhibits the Thomas Lipton cup, which will go to the winner of the Los Angeles-Honolulu yacht race. Beside her is a model of one of the contestants.

By DAN THOMAS
NEA Service Writer

Los Angeles, June 8.—The greatest race in the history of yachting begins at this port on June 12.

Ten of the fastest yachts on the Pacific coast will spread their sails before the northeast trades and follow the old blue trail down the track of the vanished clipper ships, bound for Honolulu harbor in a contest that will bring out every bit of seamanship their amateur skippers can display.

And at the end of the race a resplendent silver cup, gift of Sir Thomas Lipton, the daddy of them all, will go to the winner.

While the favorable trade winds are expected to hold good throughout most of the journey, this race is distinctly no event for landlubbers. Severe storms may sweep the path of the yachts, alternating with dead calms and treacherous tropical squalls. A yatcsman who can make this cruise can call himself a sailor.

It is predicted that a new cruising record to Honolulu will be set. The present record is 11 days, 14 hours and 46 minutes, set in July, 1923, by the 106-foot two-masted schooner Mariner, then owned by L. A. Norris, but now the property of John Barrymore, the actor. Barrymore has entered it in this year's race and is confident that it will lower its own mark, although he himself will not be able to make the trip.

Among the favored contenders are two new boats, larger than any competing in any previous races to Hawaii. They are the Invader, a 137-foot boat owned by Don Lee, and Enchantress, 136 feet over all, owned by Morgan Adams. These boats can spread a tremendous amount of canvas and are good sailors in either light or heavy winds.

Another favorite is Talayha, a 102-foot black yawl sailed by Lazzard Lippman of the Catalina Island Yacht Club.

The two smallest boats in the race are J. T. Dickenson's Jubilo, which flies the pennant of the Los Angeles Yacht Club and Ray Cooke's Claribel. Both measure only 40 feet over all.

Other entries are Clem Stose's 56-foot yawl, Teva, from the San Diego Yacht Club; Mollilou, 56-foot yawl owned by M. Hesselberger of the Los Angeles Yacht Club; Alice A., Will Meyer's 50-foot mahogany-colored yawl from the Catalina Island Club, and Dr. John Harper's 44-foot yawl Fayth, which flies the pennant of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

All boats will be handicapped according to their ratings.

After a stop-over in Honolulu, the fleet will start on a return race to San Francisco, planning to arrive there in time for the Pacific coast regetta.

Japanese Trust to Lower Camphor Price

Tokyo, (United Press).—The price of camphor is coming down.

To cope the growing competition of German synthetic camphor the Japanese camphor monopoly, which controls camphor prices of the world, has decided on a program of greatly increased production and lower prices which, it is hoped, will make manufacture of the German product unprofitable.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel

DIANA

ONE of the most beautiful names which comes to us through Roman mythology is Diana. She was originally Divajana, goddess of the night, but, as she was pure as Vesta, she was identified with the Greek Artemis and given possession of the temple of Ephesus and was thenceforth regarded as the goddess of the silver bow and daughter of Jupiter and Latona.

In the Sixteenth century, when romances of chivalry began to make their appearance, Jorge de Montemayor, the Spanish poet, named his heroine Diana, and her name was quickly taken up by the sponsors of the lovely widow, Diane de Poitiers, whose colors of black and white Henry II of France wore even to his last fatal tournament. The Cavalier court during its residence in France adopted Diana and carried it back to England.

In some instances Diana is regarded as the name of the charitable lady referred to in the Scriptures as "Dinah of the Ephesians." In the Eighteenth century there was a Monna Diana in Florence whose chief claim to fame was that she mistook a large stone that fell on her head off a building, for a small pebble, because she wore such an elaborate headdress.

Crystal in Diana's talismanic gem. It guards her youth and purity, according to old superstition, and brings her many friends. Sunday is her lucky day and 7 her lucky number.

Nodaway Cattle Top Market at St. Joseph

Heifers Averaging 698 Pounds and Selling at $9.35 Make Nice Profit for A. R. Martin.

A. R. Martin of Nodaway county, Mo., was on the St. Joseph market Monday with two loads of Panhandle bred Whiteface heifers of the handy weight class that topped their division in the trade, selling at $9.35 a cwt. They averaged 698 lbs. Mr. Martin was here with the shipment and was well pleased with the sale and weight of the drove.

These heifers were purchased as calves and had been full fed 160 days on a straight corn and alfalfa ration, doubling in weight and more than doubling in value while on feed. "Figuring in the hogs fed behind these calves they made a nice profit," said Mr. Martin who is feeding two loads of Angus for the 1926 International Exposition at Chicago. He also has another load of Angus steers and heifers on feed which, he expects to market in a few weeks.—St. Joseph Stockyards Journal.

'49ers to Be Given Belated Recognition

California Will House Mementoes of Men and Women Who Gambled Their All for Gold—And Lost.

Washington, June 8.—Recognition has come to the pioneers who gambled with fate in the days of California's gold rush—and failed.

Reclaiming the little odds and ends left by trail blazers who died without known heirs—many died in almshouses and hospitals—Charles G. Johnson, state treasurer, has offered them to the historical department of the State Library.

There they should rest, Johnson believes, not alone because of their historical value, but because they are memorials to the men and women who aided in establishing the state, and who, heretofore, have gone virtually unsung and forgotten.

"They were the trail blazers whom fate shunted 'over the hill to the poor house' while their more fortunate fellows emblazoned their names on the pages of history," the treasurer said in a letter to State Librarian Milton J. Ferguson, suggesting that the state perpetuate the memory of these departed seekers after adventure and wealth.

The trinkets comprising the "estates" of these "unknown dead" are like pages from story books of long ago—books with many of the leaves gone, so that one has to guess at the plot. Love letters and photographs of relatives and sweethearts left behind, have collected the dust of the years in a tomb-like room in the basement of the capitol along with old style closed face watches, stock in long abandoned mines and empty wallets.

A faded college diploma signifying that "the directors of the Royal College of Surgeons found John Carter Harrett capable to exercise the art and science of surgery," was the principal property left by one of those who deserted a profession for the lure of easy wealth in the gold diggings. The diploma was issued in London in 1842.

A broken romance which drove him to the frontier is apparent from the possessions left by another pioneer, H. C. Brunson. When authorities checked up on his earthly belongings they found a letter from his sweetheart, a lock of hair in an old pocketbook and these lines in Brunson's handwriting:

"I'm adrift on the fast ebbing tide
With the stars of my destiny only my guide:
But I dread not the storm cloud, nor the treacherous sea,
For I'm parted from all that was precious to me."

SYNOPSIS.

The 8:22 Long Island express, on its way into New York, carries Tim Burke, real estate operator and one of his employes, Pol Gaillard. The sleekness of the latter's appearance and his nonchalant manner irritate old Burke to such a degree that he considers firing him, and finally voices his disapproval. During a talk with Pol, he changes his mind and goes off to play a hand of bridge with some cronies. Pol overhears two men behind him discussing Burke's affairs, and the boy learns his employer is trying to get an especially desirable piece of shore property on Long Island owned by Prof. Husted and also coveted by another land shark, Michael Cadrigan.

INSTALLMENT III.

Burke Again Changes His Mind.

The rather nasal voice continued behind Pol: "Cadrigan's the big cheese down there, but I'll say he is a bad egg. Like father, like son. The old man was a power in city politics under Boss Tweed. Managed to get out from under Boss Tweed."

"I know something about Cadrigan. Big college athlete in his day. Crew and football and all round man. Boxer and wrestler."

"Yes, the whole show. Not a Mick like Tim Burke, but slick and smooth. Quiet underground worker, I should say. He settled there about twenty-five years ago when they were shipping in lumber to build all along the shore. Got into real estate, and I guess he's made his pile."

"I'll say he has. I know of one deal where he must have cleaned up a couple of hundred thousand to date. The Old Colony Country club. Got options on four or five hundred acres of landscape, and offered the club a hundred acres franco in the middle of it. They put up their hundred thousand dollar clubhouse, and Cadrigan got his from the sales of the surrounding property."

"That graft is getting overplayed. Unless a man could grab off something like Husted's point. You got the yachting features, there, and aquatic sports. Gorry, but that property would make a land shark's month water."

"Well, I guess if it's anybody it will be Cadrigan. They say down there it's all he thinks about."

"Has he got a family?"

"Widower. He married an American woman who was the widow of an Italian count." The nasal voice grew brisker and slightly raised. "Say, Tom, there was a funny business, too. I knew the Count di Carsoli, slightly. He was one wild guy. Ex-colonel of a crack Italian cavalry regiment. Had to resign for debts, or something. His wife came of one of the old families down there, rich in land and Hartford New Haven stock, and owned the local bank. They say the count treated her pretty badly. Mixed it up with the wops that were locating along the line. Well, they found him on the beach one fine morning with a stab wound in the heart."

"The duece you say! And Cadrigan married his widow?"

"Yes. About a year and a half later. That was natural enough, because she had inherited a lot of shore property that he was beginning to specialize in, and they'd done some business together."

"Ever collar the murderer?"

"Not that I heard of. Perhaps they didn't try hard. The chances are the gay count's record wouldn't stand much searching. His grand seigneur stuff might not have worked on the wops over here."

Mr. Burke, a dummy just then, happened to glance down the car at Pol, of whom and of whose remarks about model homes he may have been thinking more than of his game of cards. Mr. Burke smiled grimly. "That cub has not the stomach for all-night poker parties," he told himself. For Pol looked really ill.

Continuing to observe him while waiting for the hand to be played out, Mr. Burke's face hardened. While never the man to shirk a fight, he was still a good deal of a bully in the moral sense. It was a sort of vicious indulgence of his to browbeat the weak or timid, but even a bantam blustering at his thick legs would have won his respectful consideration. Up to this time Pol's breezy assurance and the subtle mockery of his eyes and respectful formality had held Mr. Burke at bay, kept him in doubt, made him curiously shy about firing Pol.

But at this moment Pol gave Burke the impression of defenselessness. The young man had a devitalized look, seemed to huddle in his chair like a seasick person. Mr. Burke's bullying nature rose uppermost at the sight of this vitiation of nerve force in a person whom he had often desired to bully without being able to manage it. In that moment he came to a positive decision to fire Pol as soon as they arrived at the office. The young man evidently was something of a bluff. Not the prickly porcupine he looked.

Mr. Burke picked up his cards and played the next hand, chewing contentedly at his cigar. The determination to fire Pol relieved his mind, as is likely to happen after a long period of vacillation. Thought Burke to himself: "Why should I fool with a slick dude that comes to work lookin' as if he would die before the day was over. And he called my model homes—slave quarters. What was the word—something that had to do with coons—barrycoons. No man who works for me can sass me to my face, especially"—he looked toward Pol again—"such a poisoned pup."

These thought words died on his mental lips. The gnawed cigar almost slipped from the physical ones. For in the brief time taken to deal and sort the cards, some sort of miracle seemed to have been worked on Pol. His dying look had disappeared, and in its place there came pouring out of him such lambent sparks of high tension of emotion that even the cross-eyes of Burked seemed to see them and his ears to hear their crack and hiss. Burke stared at Pol dumbfounded.

It struck him that the young man might be on the verge of some sort of a fit. D. T's perhaps, or he might be a drug habitue seized suddenly with the imperative need of is dose. But this idea did not seem to fit Pol's aspect, which was more like that of a man about to fight, or furiously eager to fight, but restrained from doing so. Burke in the old days had kept fighting bull terriers and game cocks, and once when trout fishing up in Sullivan county a young farmer of the place had trapped a wildcat without much injuring the animal and placed a standing bet of fifty dollars that it would kill or vanquish any dog put up against it. Now as he looked at Pol he was reminded of the general aspect of that bobcat while waiting for a dog to be thrust in upon it, or watching the dog through the slats of the crib.

He was called upon then to play his hand, which he did so abstractedly as to arouse the ire of his partner. It was a rapid game between skilled bridge players, and should have demanded all of Burke's attention. He lost the hand, which did not improve his temper or his state of mind toward Pol. When he looked up at him again, there was no trace of all of the lurid but restrained passion that he had evidenced some few minutes before.

Burke was puzzled and angry, but more than ever determined to have done with Pol. There was something uncanny about the fellow, a screw loose somewhere. First he was flippant and mocking and disturbing in his unflattering commentaries on achievements in which Burke felt monumental pride. Then he bogged down with the glaze of a dead fish, to portray an instant later the bottled fury of a baited bobcat, and when surveyed again some seconds later presented all the aspect of a dope fiend that had just given himself a jab. Burke, who knew something about such tormented subjects grasped at his idea for a solution, but found it inadequate. The reactions had been too rapidly consecutive. More like the pell-mell transit of terrific mental emotions. The sort of thing one caught sometimes on the faces of those brutes known as sporting men or fight fans as they watched the rapidly fluctuating fortunes of the ring.

The train drew into the Grand Central. Pol walked to the office which was nearby. He was looking over some mail when summoned to the private office of Mr. Burke. A distinct change of manner was evident in that big chief. His heavy face wore a frown.

"I've been thinkin' over our talk on the train, Mr. Gaillard, and the more I think of it the less I like it. You called me a builder of slave barracks. You have a slick way of savin' things, but they do not stand measuring by the tape."

"Say rather they do not stand any stretching of the tape, Mr. Burke."

The frown became a scowl. "Now, just what do you mean by that, young man?"

"Precisely what I say, sir. In engineering we use a chain and not a tape, that there shall be no room for error. That is the great point of difference between surveying property and what is done with it later."

"Are you trying to say the real estate business is tricky?"

"It is trickier than I am, Mr. Burke. You can take that statement according to your opinion of myself."

Burke's heavy face purpled. "I have smashed men in the jaw for less than that."

"So have I, Mr. Burke. I am quite ready to do it again."

"Damn you, get out of here before I paste you."

"Your pasting days are over, Mr. Burke. The sheriff does it for you now when you order a forced sale. On the house and tin garage. He pastes labels."

"You are fired!" Burke roared. "Thrun out."

"Like a boomerang, Mr. Burke." (Copyright, 1925; Henry C. Rowland)

$15,000 and a Job in the Movies

Teddy Winslow, 18, won a beauty contest in Los Angeles. More than a hundred girls competed. And the prize was $15,000 in cash and a movie contract.

Speaking of Troubles.

(Pathfinder).

Two men occupied adjoining seats on the train. One, accompanied by a little girl and a little boy, were a dejected air and took no notice of the gambols of his children. The other resented their gaiety. Indeed, the little boy had sat down upon his hat, and the little girl had knocked a suitcase off the rack onto his head. Finally the stranger could bear it no longer. "Sir," he said, "if you cannot keep your children in order, I will complain to the conductor."

The father sighed. "Your misfortunes," he said, "are as nothing to mine. My little girl has just swallowed the tickets, my little boy has broken a window in the next car, I have left my money at home, and I note, from the name of the last station, that we are on the wrong train."

SPASMODIC TWITCHING CAN BE REMEDIED

A Tic or Chorea May Be Due to An Infection or to Intestinal Poisoning, But the Cause Must First Be Found.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator From New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

There are so many physical disabilities that to make a list of them would require a whole book. Many of the very names are unknown to most folks.

For instance, do you know what a tic is?

You have seen lots of folks who wink or squint their eyes every few minutes. Others raise the eyebrows at regular intervals.

Not understanding the uncontrollable tendency to perform this way, you may get mad at a stranger who appears to be looking at you while he violently winks his left eye. You may get the mistaken notion he is trying to flirt with you. He isn't. He has a tic and can no more help the spasmodic movement than he can stop his heart from beating.

DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Suddenly shrugging one shoulder and repeating the movement every little while is another form of tic. The head may be drawn to one side for a moment. There may be twitchings of any muscle or group of muscles.

Any involuntary muscular movement, regularly repeated, may be a form of tic and probably is. It may be passed off as a regular and intended movement, but it won't take long for you to discover that the symptom is merely another case of tic.

Some children suffer from chorea, or "St. Vitus's dance," as it is commonly called. They go through all sorts of contortions, to their own embarrassment and the chagrin of their parents.

In a sense chorea is only an exaggerated tic. The spasms of that disease correspond to the twitchings and lesser muscular spasms of an adult.

We regard every such symptom as the sign of a sensitive and delicate nervous system. To determine what is wrong it is important to study the affected individual with the greatest thoroughness. There will be found some definite and, fortunately, removable condition.

It is vitally necessary to make sure there is not absorption of pus from a center of infection. Bad teeth and, in children particularly, infected tonsils and adenoids may be the seat of the exciting cause of the nervous disturbance.

Many a child and lots of adults, too, are upset by intestinal poisoning. Chronic constipation is a serious ailment which should be regarded so calmly as it is. The absorption of intestinal waste is a factor of great importance in the development of nervous symptoms.

Whenever a tic develops there must be insisted upon a life free from worry and devoted to the rules of hygiene. Fresh air, good food, exercise, plenty of rest and sleep—all these are important.

The child must be shielded from ridicule and should be encouraged to go forward in the spirits and exercises so dear to youthful hearts. Kind and considerate companions must be sought. They can be found, because any child is kind at heart, and when matters are explained will be glad to assist.

Answers To Health Queries.

L. H. Q.—To what are so-called moth patches due and what will remove them?

A.—Liver spots or so-called moth patches may be cleared up by paying careful attention to the intestional elimination. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question. They are more or less due to constipation.

R. H. C. Q.—My bones continually crack and I am greatly annoyed while eating. There is no pain but the cracking is very annoying and embarrassing.

A.—Massaging with warm cod liver oil will relieve this condition. The trouble is due to a lack of synovial fluid around the joints.

Mrs. M. Q.—Will you kindly give me a remedy for a growling stomach?

A.—This is due to gases from improper diet and poor intestinal elimination. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Mr. K. R. P. Q.—What do you advise for falling hair and dandruff?

A.—Shampoo the hair frequently, and use a good hair tonic. Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for full particulars and repeat your question.

SAYS CITIZENS NEGLECT VOTE

SEATTLE'S WOMAN MAYOR TELLS OF RESPONSIBILITIES.

FAILURE UP TO ALL

If Government Becomes Corrupt, Whose Fault Is It, Asks Mrs. Bertha Landes.

By MRS. BERTHA K. LANDES
(New Mayor of Seattle, Wash).

Seattle, June 8.—As a citizen with four years experience as a public official, I feel in some measure qualified to speak on the responsibilities of the voters under our scheme of government. In a government of the people, for the people, by the people, the people themselves must assume certain responsibilities or the "of the people" and "by the people" will fail and "for the people" will not materalize.

We are forced to admit that we have not eliminated corruption in politics—that many wrongs are committed in the name of liberty—that social justice is still, in a large measure, in the future—that our courts organized and established to execute justice are far from doing it—and that graft and a serious disrespect for the law are outstanding features in our body politic today.

We must ask ourselves from what do these evils arise, and who is responsible for them?

If government today is a failure, or a partial failure, it is because we, as citizens, are not functioning as we should. A piece of machinery is dead and powerless until some motive force is applied to it. Just so with our government. It cannot operate without a motive power behind it. The motive power in our case is the citizenry of the country. If the citizens fail to function or if we go upon the assumption that by some miracle a person on obtaining majority falls heir to political wisdom, then only dire results can follow.

We must have an intelligent citizenship. The standard of intelligence in this country is high, though not as high as it ought to be, but we turn our intelligence in every direction, it sometimes seems, but toward the problems of government and the qualifications of candidates for office. We do not stop to think how vitally these things affect each and every individual. If we did, we would pay more attention to them.

Taxation, we will admit, is a burning question, but does the average citizen to anything about it except to rail at high taxes? Does he try to find out how his money is spent and for what? Does he realize that in local matters especially, each individual is more or less responsible for the size of his tax bill?

Does he stop to think that the demands for this, that, and the other made by the citizens themselves have a very significant bearing on his bill? Does he realize that though the citizen himself may pay for the installation of street lights, sewer, watermains, and for paving, that the city later has to foot the bill for maintenance?

Further, does the citizen ever stop to realize that the test of whether the tax rate is high or not depends upon how much you are getting for your dollar? If taxes are too high because of inefficiency in government or because of corruption or graft, does the citizen shoulder any responsibility or realize that he has any?

Who put those people in office? Does he ever try to solve any of the civic problems, suggest remedies for wrong conditions, or does he wait until election time, put those rascals out (I am quoting now) and then just as likely put more rascals in because he won't exert himself to rectify matters by giving a little time, a little thought, and a little service.

When a citizen votes for a candidate for public office, especially in local affairs, merely because of blind partisanship and without regard to intelligence, capability or moral integrity, he makes himself a party to bad government and corruption. Inefficiency in government means waste. Corruption in government means not only serious waste but breaks down public morale and corruption in government and the falling down of justice in our courts are due to a selfish and unintelligent electorate coupled with apathy and indifference on the part of the citizens.

American citizens are failing miserably to measure up to their high calling in one other important particular—that of standing out for law observance. Herein lies one of the greatest dangers of the present day.

Our young people are prone enough to evade law if possible, but when their elders set them an example of law violation, but in public and in private, the evil is multiplied many fold, and a government whose laws are flouted can not long exist.

We are a nation of law violators, both in the large and the small things, and we are building in such a way that the edifice which we are rearing will tumble about our heads, pulling down with it all the old safeguards of an orderly and established government.

In some way we must get the spirit of law observance into the hearts and minds of our people and insist upon law enforcement from our public officials. It is not right to say that any law can not be reasonably enforced. We merely mean that we do not approve of it and don't want it enforced, and, therefore, it is not being enforced. Repeal useless, harmless and unwise laws, but while you keep them on the statute book demand enforcement.

Parents must begin at home with themselves and their children; citizens must demand law enforcement from their public officials; and the whole nation must waken to the danger, and in season and out of season preach and practice law observance and law enforcement. Treat high and low, alike, and there will soon be created an atmosphere favorable to the growth of right sentiment and obedience to law.

Now it follows that an intelligent, active, awakened citizenship could and would work wonders in this land of ours and nothing else can. Progress in government will be accomplished only just as fast as we assume our rightful responsibility. What we need is to educate ourselves and our children in order that we may think for ourselves and work unselfishly that others may share the benefits.

HOGS HIGHEST IN SIX YEARS; LAMBS HIGHER.

Kansas City Stock Yards, June 7.—Hog prices advanced 10 to 20 cents today to a new high position for the year and were the highest of the past six years and the highest ever known in a peace time period. Quotations now lack but little of being on a 15 cent basis. Lambs ruled 25 cents higher under an active demand. Receipts were fairly liberal. Cattle were quoted steady to 15 cents higher than last week and fed cattle now seem to be gathering strength for a general advance. Full fed kinds are scarce and will continue so.

Today's Receipts.

Receipts today were 10,000 cattle, 11,000 hogs, and 9,000 sheep compared with 10,500 cattle, 10,000 hogs and 13,000 sheep a week ago and 15,575 cattle, 10,600 hogs and 3,425 sheep a year ago.

Beef Cattle.

Choice to prime steers sold at $9.75 to $10.00 and good steers brought $9.50. They came from Colorado, Missouri and Nebraska and had been fed grain or fattened on sugar beet pulp. The plainer kinds brought $9.25 to $9.50 and were quoted strong to 15 cents higher. Fair to good steers brought $8.75 to $9.25. Demand was not particular as to weights. Strictly prime steers would have brought $10.25 or better, had they been offered. Some Texas steers on the native side sold at $7.50 to $8.40 and in the quarantine division at $6.00 to $7.25. Full fed steers will probably advance in the next ten days. Cows and heifers were in active demand at firm prices. Straight heifers and steers and heifers mixed sold up to $9.50 and cows up to $7.50. Veal calves were quoted weak with top price unchanged at $11.50.

Stockers and Feeders.

The small supply of stock and feeding cattle offered sold readily at firm prices. Much larger supplies are needed to meet requirements but runs will remain small for another thirty days.

Hogs.

The upward swing in hog prices is still unchecked and today the market recorded the highest position ever known in a peace time period. Many are of the opinion that a further advance will prevail and that summer prices will be well above $15.00. Today's advance was 10 to 20 cents. The top price $14.35 was paid for light lights. The 170 to 210 pound weights sold at $14.65 to $14.80; 210 to 260 pounds, $14.40 to $14.65; 260 to 325 pounds, $13.90 to $14.40; sows, $12.50 to $13.25 and stock hogs and pigs, $15 to $15.75.

Sheep and Lambs.

A strong to 25 cent higher market prevailed in the sheep division. Trade was active. Spring lambs, both natives and western sold at $16.50 to $17.50. Some Texas shorn wethers brought $8.75 and odd bunches of ewes sold at $5.50 to $7.00.

Horses and Mules.

Trade in the horse and mule division is limited by the small supplies. Few will be offered in the next two months.

Market Correspondent.

Closing Grain Review.

Chicago, June 8.—Grain prices closed higher on the Chicago Board of Trade today.

Wheat was fractionally higher in all positions. The chief news element affecting this grain was the reports of experts now in Kansas. Many parts of the state are still suffering from the effects of the dry spell although others will yield a good crop. Nebraska conditions are reported as being serious while there is but little moisture in the Northwest.

Wheat prices remained within a fairly range through the day. There was a considerable amount of selling and profit taking but there was also good buying on all dips. Cash prices were strong.

Corn closed sharply higher in all deliveries, having held practically all of the day's gains. The reports of dry weather in Iowa had some effect on the pit while many traders also lent weight to the political developments in that state, being of the belief that farm aid legislation may ensue.

Oats closed a good fraction higher in all positions, after a rather quiet day.

Provisions were higher on the strength of the grain and hog prices advancing.

U. S. Army Now Is Educational Agency, Says War Secretary

St. Louis, June 8.—The United States army was described as an educational institution making soldiers into citizens, rather than a mere machine turning citizens into soldiers, by Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis at Washington University commencement exercises here today.

"Over 40 percent of our enlisted men spend at least part of their time in attending courses in our army schools or in performing duties which fit them directly for civil occupation after they leave the army," Davis said.

"I feel that to give some 45,000 citizens training in nearly 500 useful trades and professions is a real public service. Most of the men come into the army as raw recruits without much education and with little knowledge of any useful trade. Many of them leave it as trained specialists—disciplined, self-reliant, qualified for success in civil life."

General John J. Pershing, who began at West Point, and General James G. Harbord, who began as a private soldier, were cited as outstanding products of army education.

Versailles—A shoe manufacturer from Jefferson City has about completed negotiations for the establishment of a branch factory here. A new building likely will be erected.

The COLONIAL fire bowl

makes INTENSE heat

The COLONIAL fire bowl does a double duty. It saves on fuel bills and it gives you more heat.

Of improved design, the outer surface is ribbed for greater heating surface. In each rib is a slotted air flue to admit air over the fire.

An intense heat results. Fuel lasts longer. There is less ash waste. The entire casting, too, is in one piece, heavy, rugged and durable.

Especially suited for oil burner installations. See your nearest dealer

MICHIGAN U. BANS LIQUOR

NEW PRESIDENT TAKES DECIDED STAND.

FACULTY BEHIND HIM

Birth Control and Other Controversial Questions Tackled Fearlessly by Dr. Clarence Cook Little.

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 8.—The University of Michigan has undergone a significant academic change during the past year—the first under the presidency of Dr. Clarence Cook Little, formerly of the University of Maine.

By a disregard for tradition, the youthful successor to the late President Marion Leroy Burton has won the enthusiastic support of the faculty. To the average student, the change has amounted almost to a revolution.

Major planks in Dr. Little's academic platform include a serious effort to mix student life with scholastic interests, improvement of the relations between alumni and the university and a grappling with the campus liquor problem.

Dr. Little laid down a strict rule to the undergraduate body to abolish liquor. When the initial campus uproar had subsided, fraternity after fraternity pledged its hearty co-operation.

In his frequent addresses throughout the state, the new president advocated the controversial principle of birth control. Although protests were publicly voiced in several sections of the state, the university board of trustees consistently refused to curtail in any way his liberties of speech, even in the face of a resolution passed by a religious body.

With that general support, the new president set about the task of inaugurating the follow scholastic reforms:

1. Aiding the transition of students from high school to college.
2. Correlating knowledge gained in college work with the practical problems of life.
3. Aiding the transition of the undergraduate to the field of individual creative work.
4. Inauguration of a revised system of education for women students, including courses in practical nursing and housewifery.

In addition to this program, Dr. Little has "drafted" committees of alumni to work on such problems as student housing, non-athletic activities of the university, and allied subjects.

Dr. Little has explained that it is his hope to bring each student to the point at graduation where he or she is constructively ready to take up individual, creative work in their chosen fields of endeavor.

The board of regents of U. of M. has recently reorganized the Board of Control of Athletics so as to incorporate the president as an ex-officio member of that body.

Same Today

Canon Hannay, known to fiction as George A. Birmingham, maintains that nowadays the most dramatic sermons are preached in Ireland. A friend of his heard a preacher in a Connaught village expatiating on the terrors of hell.

"The lions will roar at yez," he told his congregation. "The owls will hoot at yez, and the hyenas will laugh yez to scorn."

Another Irish preacher, having described how Jezebel painted her face, her head and looked out of the window at Jehu, remarked:

"And would you believe it, the huzzy was nigh on sixty years of age."

Any Old Excuse

President Jerry B. Sullivan of the United States board of general appraisers was talking about smuggling.

"Nearly everybody can find an excuse," he said, "for doing a bit of harmless smuggling. We're like the little boy who was getting dressed for a holiday party.

"'Oh, no, mother,' he said, 'you ain't a-goin' to wash my ears, too! Oh, no, not on your life!'

"'Why not?' said his mother.

"'Why, consarn it,' growled the boy, 'don't it say on the invitation that this is an informal party?'"

To Test Old Tradition

Near Ullensaker, in Norway, is a grass-grown and tree-grown tumulus, "Raknehaugen," 60 feet high and over 300 feet in diameter. Legend says it contains the remains of an unknown king, lying in a stone chamber, upon a couch between two white horses. In 1870 an attempt was made to open the mound, but after several perilous falls of tons of earth and sand the excavators abandoned the work. Archeologists are preparing to make a fresh attempt to test the truth of the tradition.

Crane—Tomato plant setting in this part of the county which was halted by the dry spell has been resumed.

Making a Pet of a Lion Cub

Mussolini isn't the only one who has lion cubs for playmates. There's Miss Cornelia Bakker, daughter of the hunter employed by the government to rid Glacier National Park of mountain lions. She tames the cubs of the lions he kills and gets them so "civilized" that they can roam freely in her father's chicken yard without causing trouble.

The Laughing Jackass "Right"

A strange visitor from Australia reaches Long Beach, Calif., to join Dr. J. E. Edwards' collection of rare animals and birds. This creature is the Australian kookaburra, better known as the Laughing Jackass. He is perching on the shoulder of Miss Marjorie Williamson.

Famous Work of Art Painted on Cask Top

There is an appealing legend connected with the painting of the "Madonna of the Chair," which also explains why it is circular in form. The story goes that outside of Rome dwelt a vine dresser with his daughter, Mary, and also hard by in the hills lived an old hermit who loved but two things in the world—the girl Mary, who daily carried him grapes to appease his hunger, and an ancient oak tree sheltering his hut, whose murmuring leaves brought him music and companionship in his loneliness. One day a storm wrecked his hut, and the hermit's life was saved only by seeking refuge in the oak tree. Then came Mary, who took him to her home and ministered to him until his death. The hermit harbored a pathetic gratitude toward both Mary and the tree, and prayed before he died that each might be remembered by the world. Shortly thereafter the tree was felled, and its wood made into casks, many of which were used by the vine dresser himself.

Eventually the Roman girl married and bore two children. Early one evening Raphael, while strolling, perhaps for relaxation from the arduous work of his decorations in the Vatican, chanced by this dwelling and saw in the window Mary, the mother, crooning to her last born, with her elder son at her knee. Having no canvas, he took the top of a wine cask that stood nearby and sketched the group then and there, in the soft Italian dusk. Thus was the hermit's prayer granted, for the "Madonna of the Chair," and in consequence the oak on which it is painted, have won undying fame as one of the treasures of the world. The painting hangs in the Pitti palace, Florence.—Mentor Magazine.

THIS WEEK IN MISSOURI HISTORY

Compiled by

The State Historical Society of Missouri, Columbia
Floyd C. Shoemaker, Secretary

June 6-12

Sixty-five years ago, on June 12, Governor Claiborne F. Jackson issued his proclamation calling 50,000 militia into active service "to protect the state."

This action was his practical reply to Lincoln's call for four regiments, and the immediate reply to Lyon's words: "This means war," uttered at the famous Planters' House conference the day before.

With the hounds of war snarling on the leash, Missouri's best representatives of both causes halted an instant to parley. Francis P. Blair, Jr., who believed that Missouri belonged with the North, and Nathaniel Lyon, who believed that Missouri belonged to the North, had led the fight, and had been successful at every point.

They had foiled the Southern sympathizers in the control of the invaluable arsenal at St. Louis. They had organized 10,000 soldiers at St. Louis; they had captured Camp Jackson and disarmed the militia; and they had displaced the conservative general Harney with Lyon himself as commander of the department of the West. They had won President Lincoln to their plans, and had so managed that Kansas and United States troops at Fort Leavenworth, Iowa regiments on the northern border, and Illinois troops at Cairo, Alton, and Quincy were ready to strike.

Governor Jackson realized the military helplessness of Missouri. Material destruction would ensue to the state, if any movement were made to help the South.

As the hope of armed neutrality dissolved, men were drawn to opposite poles. Relatively few Missourians fought either for slavery or for abolition. There were those whose conviction lay with the preservation of the Union; those whose belief was in taking a stand with their Southern kinsmen, and those who, doubly torn by these considerations, thought it best to save the state from invasion and internal war by staying in the Union.

Increasingly these latter were called upon to make their decisions. Sterling Price presided over the state convention which declared against secession in March; he became major-general of the state militia and went with Jackson to St. Louis to confer with Blair and Lyon.

They met at the Planters' House under the Stars and Stripes. Thomas L. Snead, aide-de-camp of the governor, describes the close of the conference thus:

"Finally, when the conference had lasted four or five hours, Lyon closed it as he had opened it. 'Rather,' said he, (he was still seated and spoke deliberately, slowly, and with a peculiar emphasis) 'rather than concede to the State of Missouri the right to demand that my Government shall not enlist troops within her limits, or bring troops into the State whenever it pleased, or move its troops at its own will into, out of, or through the State; rather than concede to the State of Missouri for one single instant the right to dictate to my Government in any matter however unimportant, I would' (rising as he said this, and pointing in turn to every one in the room) 'see you, and you, and you, and you, and you, and every man, woman, and child in the State, dead and buried.' Then turning to the Governor, he said: 'This means war. In an hour one of my officers will call for you and conduct you out of my lines'."

Governor Jackson burned the bridges behind him as he went back to Jefferson City that night. By daybreak, on June 12, his proclamation was going to press.

"A series of unprovoked and unparalleled outrages have been inflicted upon the peace and dignity of this Commonwealth and upon the rights and liberties of its people by wicked and unprincipled men, professing to act under the authority of the United States Government. The solemn enactments of your Legislature have been nullified; your volunteer soldiers have been taken prisoners; your commerce with your sister States has been suspended; your trade with your own fellow citizens has been, and is, subjected to the harassing control of an armed soldiery; peaceful citizens have been imprisoned without warrant of law; unoffending and defenceless men, women and children have been ruthlessly shot down and murdered; and other unbearable indignities have been heaped upon your State and yourselves."

The proclamation then takes up the Price-Harney agreement; the conference with Blair and Lyon; and the proposals offered by both sides. "Nothing but the most earnest desire to avert the horrors of civil war from our State, could have tempted me to propose these humiliating terms. . . . . Fellow-citizens! all effort toward conciliation have failed. . . .

"Now, therefore, I, Claiborne F. Jackson, Governor of the State of Missouri, do, in view of the foregoing facts and by virtue of the powers vested in me by the Constitution and laws of this Commonwealth, issue this my proclamation, calling the militia of the State to the number of fifty thousand into the active service of the State, for the purpose of repelling said invasion, and for the protection of the lives, liberties, and property of the citizens of the State. . ."

In Missouri was there actual civil war. Sixty percent of her men capable of bearing arms participated, a higher percent than that of any other state. It is estimated that 110,000 fought for the Union, and between 30,000 and 40,000 for the Confederacy.
